

Bright Lights, Big City: Patrice Delaveau Thrills at Longines Masters of Hong Kong as All Eyes Turn to New York

By Lindsay Brock/Jump Media • Horses in iconic cities is a phenomenon that has taken show jumping by storm in recent years, and none do it better than the Longines Masters. Traveling to Hong Kong in early February, the third season of the Longines Masters includes a final stop in New York on April 26-29, 2018, after an opening event in Paris in December 2017. As the star-studded event took up its place at the helm of the inaugural Asia Horse Week, it wasn't 'over 'til it was over'.

At the peak of competition, Patrice Delaveau claimed the Longines Grand Prix for his home country of France riding Aquila HDC. The victory came over Austrian Max Kühner on Cielito Lindo 2 by just 0.07 seconds in a 12-horse jump-off, and unseated Germany's Daniel Deusser from his Grand Slam Indoor track. Finishing third aboard Cornet D'Amour, Deusser clinched the Longines Grand Prix of Paris at the end of 2017 and was inevitably eyeing the Grand Slam Indoor title and the super bonus of €2.25 million, achieved by winning three consecutive Longines Grand Prix in Paris, Hong Kong and New York in the same season.

"It was great today, and my horse was fantastic," said Delaveau, who won the $382,800 purse in front of a packed house at the AsiaWorld-Expo in the heart of Hong Kong. "I love it here in Hong Kong."

Behind the top three, Australian Jamie Kermond placed fourth on Yandoor Oaks Constellation, while British legend Michael Whitaker piloted Calisto Blue to fifth.

The focus now shifts to Delaveau, who has a chance to collect the Grand Slam Indoor bonus of €1 million if he can win the Longines Grand Prix at the final leg of the current season of the Longines Masters Series in New York, and follow it up with a win in Paris at the start of the 2018-2019 season.

Throughout three days of exhilarating competition, the Longines Masters of Hong Kong also saw victories from Emanuele Gaudiano of Italy aboard Einstein in the Table A competition of the Masters One AsiaWorld-Expo, Clarissa Lyra and Vincent Ho of Team Dash from Hong Kong in the Hong Kong Jockey Club Race of the Riders, Germany's Philipp Weishaupt on Chacon in the prestigious Longines Speed Challenge, Michael Whitaker riding Valentin R in the Maserati Masters Power, and fellow countryman Robert Smith atop Cimano E in the event's penultimate class, the Masters One DBS.

Also competing in the Masters One DBS was American Olympian Reed Kessler, who took home fourth place and also finished ninth in the Longines Speed Challenge. Kessler will be traveling to all three continents this season as the only American to compete in each leg of Season III of the Longines Masters Series.

The weekend not only saw world-class riding from veteran show jumpers hailing from around the world, but was also the stage for future stars of the Hong Kong equestrian sport. Leung Oi Man took home the trophy on Day 2 in

The Hong Kong Jockey Club Junior Challenge and Nathaniel Chan came out victorious with The Hong Kong Jockey Club Junior Trophy on the competition's final day.

"It is fantastic to see riders from China, Hong Kong, Chinese Taipei, and Australia are able to compete at the Longines Masters of Hong Kong alongside the best riders in the world," said Christophe Ameeuw, Founder & CEO of EEM and the Longines Masters Series." On the occasion of the first edition of the Asia Horse Week, the participation of these riders shows how the sport is developing in this region and globally."

Speaking specifically about Asia Horse Week, Ameeuw continued, "We want to create an annual rendezvous for the international equestrian players to bridge the knowledge, interests, and know how between Asia and the rest of the world, an event where ultimately the entire equestrian culture and all horse-related professions and sports are represented."

Throughout the one-of-a-kind event, nearly 200 hundred equestrian experts attended the forum and it was broadcast and translated live on social media and EEM.TV, with many influential media outlets present. Held alongside the Longines Masters of Hong Kong, the summit has already rightly earned its place on the calendar, assuring it will be a staple on the international equestrian stage for many years to come.

With the Longines Masters of Hong Kong in the books, Season III of the Longines Master Series will host its grand finale in New York on April 26-29, 2018, as the world's top riders travel to compete in a debut New York event at NYCB Live, home of the Nassau Veterans Memorial Coliseum. It will be the largest indoor event in New York since the National Horse Show left Madison Square Garden. Notably, after a successful launch at the Longines Masters of Paris, the second leg of the inaugural Riders Masters Cup, presented by EEM and EEF, will be staged in New York. A brand-new type of equestrian competition, the Riders Masters Cup pits the United States and Europe against each other in an exhilarating head-to-head team matchup. Europe took the glory in Paris, but the United States team is stacked and ready for a comeback on home soil this spring.
