Bringing you news, advice, and tools to improve your barn management experience!

Whether you are managing a large show barn or boarding operation or taking care of your own mounts, chances are good that you got into the role for one primary reason: because you enjoy spending time with horses.

Unfortunately, if you're in one of the aforementioned positions, you also know that far too often time spent enjoying the horses can get overshadowed by the scheduling of lessons, and farrier visits, and veterinary appointments, and the horse show entries, and the feeding, and the record keeping, and the tack and equipment organization and maintenance, and the planning of each day, and... well, you get the idea!

While you can't eliminate these things entirely – they're important to keeping the horses happy and healthy and the business running smoothly – there are several ways that you can streamline your paperwork and simplify your barn management to get you out of the office or away from the white board and back with the horses more often!

1) Take advantage of time-saving barn hacks.

Using polo wraps? Pro Equine Grooms recommends using a pair of scissors to cut a design, like a notch or zig-zag, into the ends of matching polo wraps to save time matching up pairs.

Do you have to make multiple trips to the feed room at dinner time? Instead of going back and forth, prepare all horses' meals and put them into a wheelbarrow or add feed and supplements to wheeled cart with compartments so that you can roll down the aisle way, stopping at each stall as you go. Peruse our blog, and you'll find lots more tips and tricks like these!

Does Your Horse Need Its Teeth Checked?

with Equine Dental Professional Mike Lawrence

BARNMANAGER

Proper dentistry is an integral aspect of optimal horse welfare. As an owner, trainer, rider, or barn manager it is very important to be aware of symptoms that indicate your horse is due for dental care.

The easiest way to know a horse is due for dental maintenance is to put a reminder into the horse's BarnManager record for a dental exam every six months.
