Maddie Tosh Dazzles in Final Phase to Win the EMO Insurance/USHJA 3'3" Jumping Seat Medal Final - East

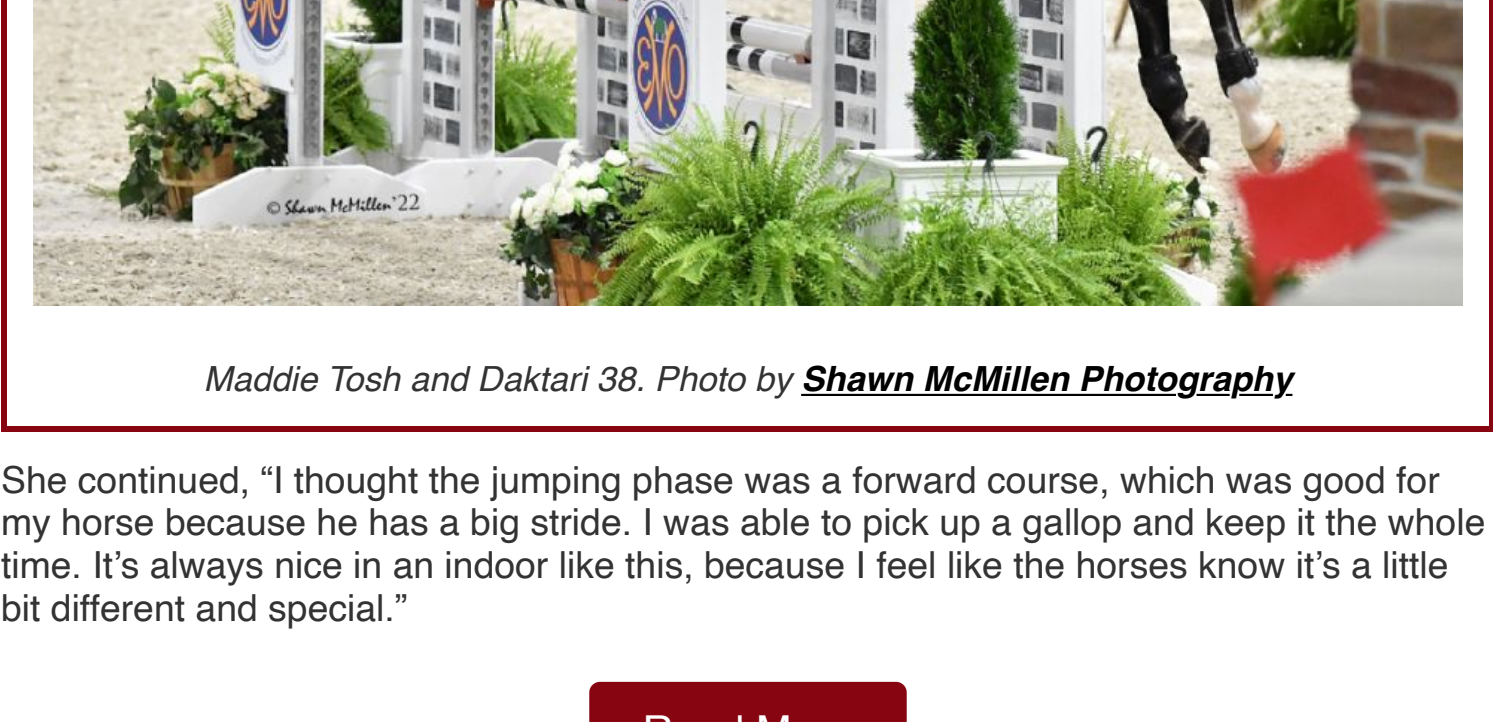

Six new champions were crowned on the second day of Equitation Weekend, presented by BIGEQ.com, on Friday, September 30, at the 2022 Capital Challenge Horse Show in Upper Marlboro, Maryland. The day in the Show Place Arena at the Prince George's Equestrian Center culminated with the final phase of the sixth-annual EMO Insurance/United States Hunter Jumper Association (USHJA) 3'3" Jumping Seat Medal Final - East, where Maddie Tosh of Milton, Georgia, piloted Dakтари 38 to the high score of 87 to secure the overall lead and don the winning ribbon sash.

Tosh was in seventh after scoring 85.1 in the flat phase and moved up to second place with an 85.5 in the gymnastics phase, in which scores are multiplied by a coefficient of 1.5. Her 213.35 total was just .325 points off of the lead, and with scores in the final phase multiplied by a coefficient of 2, it was still anyone's game.

"My horse was really great all the way through," said Tosh, who trains with her father, professional hunter rider Hunt Tosh. "I thought the flat was good, and in the gymnastics phase he couldn't have been any better, so I felt like we had a strong start coming into today. I'd honestly rather come back in second than on top-it gives me a little wiggle room."

She continued, "I thought the jumping phase was a forward course, which was good for my horse because he has a big stride. I was able to pick up a gallop and keep it the whole time. It's always nice in an indoor like this, because I feel like the horses know it's a little bit different and special."
